

Table of Contents

UK Retail Casualties in the Credit Crunch 2009: Credit crunch acts as catalyst for sector suffering from overcapacity

CHAPTER 1: EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

CHAPTER 2: KEY FINDINGS

- Credit crunch acts as catalyst
- Trend in casualties comes in three waves – inevitable, housing related, then credit related
- £6.5bn of retail sales, 9,500 stores and 24 million sq ft of space affected
- Poor space productivity a common feature
- Opportunities
 - Shedding unprofitable stores and debt
 - Gaining share and scale
 - Space acquisition
- Online retail insulated from the credit crunch
- Electricals market supported by innovation
- £3.9bn available in lost spend
- Clothing & footwear sector most affected by casualties
- Furniture & floorcovering offers significant share gain potential
- Food & grocery and health & beauty least affected sectors

CHAPTER 3: UK RETAIL CASUALTIES 2008-2009

- Summary of metrics among retail casualties
- Poor space productivity key feature of casualties
- Credit crunch speeds up the inevitable outcome of overcapacity
- Timeline of casualties – three distinct waves
- Sector analysis
- Opportunities per sector
- Retail casualties - commentary

FIGURES

- Average annual growth rate in retail volumes over four decades 1968-2007
- Retail space growth 1988 - 2007
- Average retail growth per sector 1968 - 2007
- Timeline of retail casualties by outlets/value January 2008 – March 2009
- Retail casualties - value & space per sector total January 2008- March 2009
- Share of casualties' sales by sector (including Woolworths' estimated sales/space per sector)
- Share of spending per sector 2009e affected by casualties 2009e
- Available spend per sector from casualties' lost sales 2009e
- Available % market share from casualties lost sales per sector 2009e

TABLES

- Summary of retail casualties, January 2008 – March 2009
- Average sales densities of casualties vs sector averages
- Sales, outlets & space affected by administration January 2008 – March 2009
- Timelines & commentary on individual retail casualties January 2008 – March 2009

www.verdict.co.uk

The leading authority on UK and European Retail Markets...